A Fun, Standalone Older Men Younger Women Romance with No Cliffhanger

Callie never wanted to work for her dad's security firm. In fact, she would rather be cleaning toilets than starting on her first day, but she doesn't make the rules and sometimes life isn't fair.

When Callie starts working at the office, she is sure that she's going to hate it. Her dad hasn't even given her a real job, he's just told her to make herself useful. The coffee room starts to become her favourite place, but it isn't the coffee that's drawing her in.

In fact, it's the cute British guy who seems to know all about her, even though she hasn't even told him her name. When Callie blows off work to go out for the day, she's surprised to find an unknown number calling her and when she answers it, she is even more surprised by who is on the other side.

Suddenly Callie finds her world being turned upside down, as she falls for a guy who seems too perfect for words, but then something happens that could turn Callie's world upside down. When her dad calls her into the office one day and introduces her to a couple, who is friends with, Callie recognizes one of them and her perfect little world starts to fall apart.

Not knowing what to do or who to turn to, she calls her best friend for help, but when he tells her a few home truths about their friendship, she realizes that things might not be, as bad, as they seem and sometimes when one door closes, a window really does open.
