The quest for fame has kept Alex Palmer focused on her concert pianist career and nothing else. Seeking to spread her acclaim beyond her native Great Britain, she eagerly agrees to act as a last minute substitute performer at a star-studded Hollywood gala and is immediately drawn to starlet Joanne Davison. Both women believe they have good reason to keep any hint of a relationship a secret, especially when long distances challenge its success. But tragedy pulls Jo to Alex's side—and neither of them realize that together they are now a target for more dangerous things than gossip.

Lyn Dowland debuts with a roller coaster ride of dangerous longing and breathless romance.
