Art With An Attitude Daniel Wilder

Introduction

"The primary focus of this text was to give a concise and chronological account regarding the development of materials, techniques, and terms concerning the discipline of painting.

This in turn led to how current events involving academia economics, the environment, politics, and religion, social, the visual fine arts community, and war may have influenced the creative endeavors of painters over the last 42,000 years.

Even though many historical events have taken place since the cave dwelling artist first recorded Homo sapiens existence, I thought certain happenings during the 19th and 20th centuries to be of particular interest.

Naturally, I found it intriguing to unravel the timelines of the creative events that took place during these two complex art periods. However, it was especially thought provoking to learn which artists were involved with a particular movement or the creation of a specific concept, style and/or painting technique. Simply stated, creating Art with an Attitude."
