Speakeasy Murder

*Also available as part of a box set*

When Patrolman James H. Masterson was murdered in January, 1927, in a New York City speakeasy, while observing the place on an undercover investigation, the most capable men in the Police Department were assigned the job of running down the gunmen. Detectives Thomas Martin and Steven G. Donahue, two of the best sleuths of the Homicide Squad, were picked for the task and were soon on the trail of the four ruthless murderers, eventually tracking them down to their mountain hideout where a deadly shootout ensued. The manner in which these detectives accomplished their task was regarded as one of the most brilliant feats in the annals of the Department, and was rewarded by two of the highest honors obtainable. All the other detectives working on the case were also cited for honorable mention.
